

INFLUENCES – Friends

QUEST 6: Answers

Qualities of a good or bad friend

Pupils' answers will vary but may include:

EXAMPLES FROM STAR WARS

Lando: Bad

- He doesn't warn his friends or help them escape.
- He pretends to be friendly and treat them well, when the whole time he knows that there is a trap waiting for them.
- He is putting himself first, trying to keep his city safe from Darth Vader, he makes a deal to turn his friends over to him.
- He is helping a bully and allowing himself to be bullied.

Han Solo: Bad

- He is only thinking of himself and the reward.
- He doesn't stay and help his friends, so that he can help himself.
- He goes off on his own, without his friends- when they need his help.

C-3PO: Good

- He tells the family about all the good qualities in his friend.
- He helps his friend get chosen.
- He speaks up so he and his friend, R2-D2, can stay together.

Han Solo B: Good

- He risks his life to help his friend.
- He chooses to not continue fixing his ship to leave and pay his debts to a bully, which would get himself out of trouble, to help get his friend, Luke, get out of trouble.

The ultimate bad guy:

Bully list (and reasons) can include:

Emperor Palpatine: turns people to the dark side. Often threatens people and has little feeling for others.

Likes to control situations and others.

Jabba the Hutt: forces people to work for him. Punishes people around him when he is not happy. Likes to control situations and others.

Darth Vader: forces people to do things for him. Often shows little feeling for others. Threatens others. Likes to control situations and others.

Tusken Raiders: shows no feelings for others. Can hurt people, destroy property or take slaves.

Boba Fett: involved in forcing Lando Calrissian to hand over Han Solo to Jabba the Hutt. Has no feeling for others.

Adapted from an original document created by The Edmonton Telus Science Center.